

CS 318 Client Project Agreement

The development of a website, consisting of at least five pages, is a course project for CS 318: Fundamentals of Web Page Design, at the University of Wisconsin, Eau Claire. This agreement documents the understanding of both the student and client regarding the project's purpose, content, and outcomes.

Student

- I agree to conduct as much user testing as possible to help improve the design of my site.
- I agree to honor the licenses of any media I wish to include in my project. I understand that some licenses allow content to be used for a client with commercial interests, while others expressly forbid it.
- I agree to respect the confidentiality of any private business or personal information I am asked to include on the web site.

Client

- I agree to meet with the student to provide information needed by the student to develop a website that communicates information about my organization to the website's visitors.
- I understand that the website source files created by the student will be provided to me "as is" at the end of the semester, with no expectation that the site will be hosted by the university or student beyond the end of the semester.
- I understand that there is no requirement for the student to continue working on or maintain the site after submitting the project to the instructor at the end of the semester.
- I understand that the scope of CS 318 is to create websites comprised of static content. I do not expect features like shopping carts and user accounts—or any features that require scripting—to be implemented by the student.
